Lab School Paris is an innovative, bilingual, community-based, secular school. In 2024-2025, it welcomed 122 students from the 1st to the 11th (IB) grade. Its pedagogy is inspired by the contributions of pioneers in educational innovation such as John Dewey, Célestin Freinet, Paulo Freire and Maria Montessori, as well as current research (educational sciences, psychology, sociology, cognitive sciences).

The school is recruiting a French-speaking extracurricular activity leader to supervise children during their extracurricular activities.

The coordinator will work as part of an international team of French- and English-speaking school and college teachers, a collegial management team, a communications officer and an administrative manager.

MISSIONS

Working closely with the other primary and secondary school teachers and the management team, the extracurricular activity coordinator will implement activities (fun, artistic, manual, educational and group activities) as well as pedagogical approaches adapted to the Lab School setting, the available space and the children's pace. The person will work in collaboration with two key educational players: parents and teachers.
